

eDiscovery

Maintain compliance with FRCP rules on ESI

Recent changes to the FRCP (federal rules of civil procedures) have forced businesses to take a closer look at current retention policies & procedures. Now that electronically stored information (ESI) is officially classified as discoverable evidence, companies must have data retention & retrieval solutions that enable them to comply with eDiscovery requests.

FEATURES & CAPABILITIES

Flexible retention & archival - Retain information only as long as legally required, with the ability to override policies as required

Email archival - Manage the rapidly increasing size of messaging stores while allowing for the mining of legally relevant data across multiple mailboxes

Auditing & reporting - Generate clear, concise reports on how data is stored and accessed throughout the entire data lifecycle

Universal search - Search across email messages, databases and files in a single, browser-based interface